- Poseer las habilidades que les permitan continuar avanzando en el conocimiento de la Historia Contemporánea

Advanced training in Contemporary History for teaching and research with special emphasis in the epistemological and methodological problems of the historical discipline, in the new ways of historical knowledge building and in the public uses of the past, especially of the violent pasts.

DESCRIPTION OF CONTENTS

1. History as a kind of knowledge

The path of historiography in the 19th and 20th centuries: from the setting-up of history as a discipline to the crisis of history. The most recent turns: the linguistic or rhetorical turn; the history from below, the microhistory and the history of the daily life; experiences, concepts and the time turn; the subjective turn and the I in the writing of history. The different phases in the historiographical work.

2. Memory, public uses, and historiography

The era of the witness as a victim and the new culture of memory. Individual memory, collective memory and social memory, and public memory. The duty of memory and the public uses of the past. Past presents, trauma and postmemory.

3. The articulation of memory and the public uses of the colonial past

In this unit, memory, understood as a discourse of power, and new trends in the memory studies will be addressed, together with their intersection with postcolonial and decolonial studies. Memory wars will be introduced, and the concept of cultural memory will be critically analysed. The students will delve into public uses of colonial past and its legacies, and in the connection between discourses of memory and the creation of contemporary identities.

4. Colonialism, racism and orientalism in the knowledge, the memory and the public use of the past

The universal in the Contemporary Universal History, coloniality and the epistemologies of the South. The boomerang effect of Hannah Arendt: descents to the hells out, before and after the European Civil War. Decolonising the perspectives on the Arab-Islamic world. Memory of the beginning, forgetting to the end: the past that cannot pass, memoricide, and the public use of the history of Israel-Palestine.
