SUMMARY

The purpose of the Social Education Policy subject is to create teaching and learning spaces around the social and educational policies that frame the Social Education field of work. The aim is to delve into this subject in the political dimensions of Social Education, in the links between politics and education (formal, non-formal and informal) and how these always respond to more or less visible ideological positions that need to be recognized. to critically analyze and understand the social, economic and partisan interests that sustain them. Debate about current welfare systems, the participation of citizens in their own detection and resolution of problems (community action, volunteering, social movements) and the functions that Social Education can and must play in these processes, are the axis backbone of matter. Analyzing the educational and social reality from a political perspective, allows the future social educator to have a critical, reflective and community perspective on the social reality and on their professional role as a social educator.

1306 - Degree in Social Education

- Students must be able to apply their knowledge to their work or vocation in a professional manner and have acquired the competences required for the preparation and defence of arguments and for problem solving in their field of study.
- Students must have the ability to gather and interpret relevant data (usually in their field of study) to make judgements that take relevant social, scientific or ethical issues into consideration.
- Students must be able to communicate information, ideas, problems and solutions to both expert and lay audiences.
- Students must have developed the learning skills needed to undertake further study with a high degree of autonomy.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

The expected learning outcomes in Social Education Policy are related to those necessary for the professional exercise of Social Education in communities, organized groups and Institutions, based on prior knowledge and analysis of the social, political, economic, cultural context, etc. . It is expected that the students internalize those basic competences for the development of the necessary work strategies in the fundamental areas of Social Education. In addition, it seeks to consolidate in each student the need to review and maintain personal and relational objectives that have a lot to do with the Social Education Policy: the recovery of optimism regarding the practice of the profession; the development of communication strategies and capacities in front of other professionals in the institutional framework; learn to live with conflicts and to change meanings of professional life and social, political and educational events. It is also intended to expand the instrumental background in the practice of the profession: develop flexibility in social, political and educational points of view; expand the sensitivity and capacity for critical analysis of the social, educational, political and all kinds of processes that make up today's societies, respecting thoughts, ideas and positions different from their own, as long as they respect fundamental human rights.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

The teaching methodology of the subject Politics of social education consists of using expository and participatory techniques in which the use of resources that allow to establish interactions with the students is encouraged in order to make the existing pre-concepts explicit in such a way that they are. It can redirect the common thread of the initially planned theme to the benefit of adapting to the possibilities of the group of students to integrate scientific concepts loaded with conceptual meaning that replace previously existing ones on an intuitive basis. The understanding of the contents together with the planned training activities will allow the development of the competences to be acquired. The teaching style that is proposed therefore starts from trying to achieve a level of communication with the group of students, and with each student, that allows two-way communication, between the contents that are exposed, and in which they work from different resources, and the information that the group and each member of the group provide in order to check if the learning objectives that are intended are achieved or blocked by previous factors unrelated to the content to be worked on in each teaching-learning session. Communication, feed-back, feedback during the teaching-learning process, therefore refer to the need to establish interactions in the classroom, interactions that require both didactic techniques and personal attitudes that facilitate the creation of said climate of interpersonal communication in which the contents to be transmitted, and their complementary experiences, are not a mere unilateral action disconnected from the reality of the learning group but rather a logical continuation of the exchange of ideas, opinions and informative contents on the basis of which pre-concepts collapse and scientific concepts are built. Logically, for such interactions to derive in knowledge, from which competencies emerge, it is necessary to have, prior to the work sessions in the classroom, a strategy that facilitates the study and preparation of the recommended readings and the cases and practical assumptions to be developed in each session, as well as a wide range of problems (cases, data, dilemmas, etc.) and resources (games, simulations, group dynamics, reflections, seminars, etc.) through which the concepts are not only transmitted, but also experienced, lived, aroused emotions, and fostered attitudes and aptitudes from which competencies are developed.

EVALUATION

The evaluation will be continuous and therefore will include various instruments to assess the work of each student:

- Inter-area work in coordination with the rest of the subjects of the semester
- Group readings, practical activities in the classroom and autonomous work
- Comprehensive knowledge acquisition test, especially what has been worked on in the subject: contents, practices, readings, etc.
