TEACHING METHODOLOGY

- A. Attendance at three hours per week of face-to-face class that may be theoretical or practical.
- B. Study and autonomous work of students.
- C. Attendance at training cycles in the form of conferences, workshops, visits, etc.
- D. Attendance at unscheduled tutorials: students may attend the office hours that the teaching staff has established, in order to make inquiries about any aspect or doubt about the subject.
- E. Attendance at scheduled tutorials: students may attend tutorials scheduled by the teaching staff in order to establish the necessary objectives to carry out the work, in scheduled sessions outside teaching hours.

EVALUATION

The following items will be assessed:

- 1.- The autonomous work of the students may be evaluated with a control and/or deliveries of assignments or exercises.
- 2.- Attendance at seminars or complementary activities.
- 3.- The final exam. Its purpose is to test theoretical knowledge and its practical implementation. It will be required to achieve a mark of 4/10. Otherwise, it will not be possible to sum it up to the grades that the student could achieve in parts 1 and 2.

The percentages assigned to the former variables are:

Exam: 60-50%

Readings and individual or collective projects: 30-40%

Complementary activities: 20-10%

Spelling, syntax and/or written expression problems will score negatively in the grade of all the written tests and their accumulation can lead to failure in the subject.

Regarding the second call:

The marks of readings and assignments obtained in the first call can be kept in the second call. Due to its nature and design, the complementary activity cannot be recovered on second call. Again, in the exam it will be required to achieve a mark of 4/10.
