TEACHING METHODOLOGY- Lectures

Theoretical lectures, as a provision of content by presentation and explanation by a lecturer.

Practical lectures, as a discussion of specific topics included in the programme of study, with student participation, to achieve an effective relationship between theoretical knowledge and its application: description, analysis and interpretation of artistic events, using properly a specific terminology, sources, etc.

- Seminars / complementary activities

Discussion of specific topics included in the programme of study from activities as conferences, seminars, etc.

Visits to museums, exhibitions, monuments, centres of cultural heritage, etc

In all cases, the lecturer supervises the session and the students receive assistance and direction when needed.

- Tutorial

A period of instruction given by the tutor or lecturer aimed at revising and discussing materials and topics presented at lectures. The tutor helps the process of autonomous learning and the solution of problems; for instance, in the individual project.

- Continuous assessment and exam

The test within the course unit are classed as continuous assessment, meanwhile the formal written test taken at the end of the course unit is classed as exam. The goal is to demonstrate that a learning outcome has been achieved.

EVALUATION

Assessment breakdown for first and second call. Assessment will be made up of 3 parts:

- a) Individual final exam 60%
- b) Readings and reports 20%
- c) Individual and/or group project in a collaborative space (web page) 20%

To pass the subject students must get at least 5 out of 10, and get at least 5 out of 10 as an average of both part a and b.

In the second grading call, only the exam will be repeated. Reading tests and papers will keep the grade received in the first call.
