SUMMARY

This course aims to address the current state of museology: museums history, collections and their future; museology, with a focus on the main guidelines for its management, through different departments and based on the territorial specificity; and exhibitions, through their wide variety of types and stages of development of the exhibition process, in which the art historian may have a key role.

The different architectural proposals in Spanish territory will also be analyzed, with special emphasis on those models that have been surfacing in the last decade and are a unique panorama of museology in Spain. Finally, we will address the uniqueness of the different facilities that have become indispensable from the perspective of use and enjoyment of the museums and exhibitions.
