SUMMARY

This course presents a historical overview of the theories and their application to urban planning that have emerged from antiquity to modern times. We begin with an analysis of the ancient Greek and Roman urban model and in particular with the appearance of the Hippodamic grid. We analyse the urban typologies of the Middle Ages, organically grown cities, new cities and the Islamic model. In the modern world we study the theories of urban planning and the major applications of these theories to cities or states such as Rome, Paris, Versailles, London and Spain. We also study the nineteenth century utopias and the most important urban developments in Paris, Vienna and Barcelona as well as the linear city, the garden city and industrial city. Finally, we analyse the contributions to twentieth century town planning made by Le Corbusier, Wright and other architects.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

The course is structured as follows:

- Three hours of classes per week. These theoretical and practical lessons, taught using audio-visual media and with a classified bibliography, present the essential aspects of the subject. The classes require students to read and prepare materials, manuals and texts in advance. This reading and preparation is compulsory and may be evaluated. The practical component, which may involve commenting on and analysing texts or images relating to the subject, will take place in the classroom.
- There will be a series of seminars, guided tours and other activities, attendance at some of which may be compulsory. The nature of these activities will be determined by the number of students in the group.
- Attendance at tutorials. Students may attend office hours at times set by the teacher in order to submit any queries on matters pertaining to the subject. The teacher may also arrange other tutoring sessions when appropriate.

EVALUATION

- Final exam A final written theoretical and practical exam will evaluate: - the student's understanding of the knowledge acquired - the student's understanding of the historical and cultural processes pertaining to each artistic expression - the student's ability to discuss and present an ordered and coherent discourse - the student's knowledge of the vocabulary and terminology specific to the history of art. The final exam represents 60% of the student's total grade.
- Assessment of readings and activities, including written tests, reports, summaries and synopses of the bibliography provided and of the complementary activities outlined in the section on training activities. This will evaluate: - the student's understanding of the knowledge acquired - the student's understanding of the general and specific bibliography pertaining to the various topics - the student's ability to make presentations and/or written reports on the complementary activities (visits to museums, exhibitions, archaeological sites and monuments, etc.) - the student's acquisition of an analytical and critical spirit with regard to the literature and the various sources used in the History of Art. This section represents 20% of the student's total grade.
- Oral or written practical work conducted individually or in groups to evaluate: - the student's acquisition of the skills required for searching the literature and finding information - the student's understanding of the general and specific bibliography pertaining to the various topics - the student's ability to discuss and present an ordered and coherent discourse - the student's ability to conduct analyses and make proposals for interpreting works of art - the student's acquisition of a scientific methodology in the field of the history of art - the student's ability to analyse and interpret artistic actions in relation to documentary, literary and visual sources, etc. - the student's acquisition of instrumental knowledge applied to the history of art. This section represents 20% of the student's total grade.

In summary: Written test: 60% Readings: 20% Individual or group practical work: 20%

The student's scores on the reading tests, practical work and complementary activities will be evaluated at both examination calls. No pending work submissions will be accepted and no reading tests will be repeated for the second call. Students will be permitted only to attend the written exam on the agreed day.

ADDENDUM COVID-19

This addendum will only be activated if the health situation requires so and with the prior agreement of the Governing Council

SEMI-PRESENTIAL TEACHING

1. Contents

The contents initially included in the teaching guide are maintained

2. Workload and time schedule

The activities and their hours of dedication in ECTS credits marked in the original Course Guide will be kept. Theoretical classes (hours T) will have a presence of 100% of the students and the weekly hour of complementary activities (hour P: 15 h. in total) will be carried out preferably online. Teaching planning will be specified at the beginning of the term.

3. Teaching Methodology

Theory and practice classes that may be complemented with different types of materials and activities in the Virtual classroom.

Tutorials will be done online (through the UV corporate mail) or face-to-face by prior appointment with the teacher.

If the sanitary situation changes and no access to the University facilities is possible, teaching and tutorials will be carried out completely online. In this case, the adaptations will be communicated to the students through the Virtual classroom.

4. Evaluation

The evaluation criteria established in the Course Guide are kept.

If the University facilities were closed on the dates set in the official calendar for the final exam, the face-to-face exam will be replaced by an online test.

5. Bibliographic references

The recommended bibliography in the Course Guide is kept. If the sanitary situation changes and the access to the recommended bibliography is not possible, it will be replaced by materials accessible online.
