TEACHING METHODOLOGY

A. Three hours of class per week.

These hours are distributed as follows:

- 1) Theoretical classes taught by teachers (30 hours / course). These classes will last 2 hours a week and in them the essential aspects of the subject will be exposed, it will be systematized the contents and bibliography as well as resources for exam preparation and the course work be provided. Students must attend the lectures having read the material recommended by the teacher for each session.
- 2) Practical classes (15 hours / course). The practical exercises will be done for 1 hour at the week in established classes. The aim of this activity is to help the students in reading monographs, analysis and understanding of texts, documents and materials relating to contents of the subject.

B. Practical work (individual or in group).

Throughout the course, students will have to prepare at least one paper, either individually or in group, under the direction and supervision of the instructor.

C. Attendance at seminars or complementary activities.

Students will perform 15 hours of their complementary activities or seminars planned as specify for each group.

D. Tutorials:

There will be two types of tutoring: the first one is set for the preparation and supervision of practical work. The second one is for practical consultations.

EVALUATION

1. The rating of the written tests will represents 60% of the final grade.
2. The rating of practical work will account 30% of the final grade.
3. The rating of complementary activities will represent 10% of the final grade.
4. In the second call, students who have not passed the first call, will repeat the final written test, but they cannot repeat the practical work they have done in class during the course.
5. To pass the course, the student must obtain a minimum score of 2.5 out of 6 (About 4.2 out of 10) in the written tests.

Excepting Erasmus students, grammar and spelling mistakes will score negatively on the qualification of all written tests and academic works. Their accumulation may lead to a failing grade in the subject.
