SUMMARY

The subject “History of Law” constitutes a first-year compulsory course of the law degree. It is a year-long course with 9 credits. It aims for the student to acquire a general understanding of the current law by analyzing its historical development in the Hispanic territories. It is particularly focused on the principal aspects of the elaboration of the juridical science, the knowledge of the different legal sources of each period, and an approach to some legal institutions regulated by the aforementioned sources.

First part. Understanding of the basic concepts of the course. What is history, law, history of law, and what scope does Spanish terminology have. Secondly, it is a question of knowing the principal historiography directions both of the general history and of the legal historiography, in particular the Spanish one. The indispensable questions that have to do with the production of works or historical-juridical texts, as well as its presentation (bibliography and sources...), are also approached.

Middle Ages. Analysis of the law from the Early and Late Middle Ages. The relations between nobility (fief-vassals) and between the lord and the peasant. A generic knowledge will have to be acquired on the expansion of the Christian kingdoms and the different juridical realities that originates; this supposes a minimum approach to the Muslim law. Special attention is given to the teaching of the common law. The Justinian roman law, the canon law and the common feudal law supposed the typical juridical substratum in the West for centuries, with slight differences depending on the territories and the periods of time. Organization and functioning of the universities and the creation of the legal science in the law faculties, exclusive centres of formation of the jurists from the 12th century. Study of some examples of local and territorial legislation. Finally, general features of commercial law in the Mediterranean area and in the Atlantic are also explored.

Early Modern Age. The introduction of the absolute monarchy, the increase of the real legislation and the elaboration of the compilations in the Hispanic monarchy. Scheme of the law in the ultramarine territories up to its independence in the 19th century. Brief approximation to the weak Spanish Enlightenment and to some attempts of elaborating enlightened codes. The abolition of the public foral law of the territories of the crown of Aragon and especially the abolition of the Valencian public and private law. Finally, it ensures the understanding of the changes that in the juridical science suppose the emergence of the juridical humanism, rationalism and the juridical doctrines of the “usus modernus pandectarum”.

Late Modern Age. This is the period which better explains the foundations of the current law. The purpose is then to understand the general principles of law since the Liberal revolution, as well as the principal legal sources (constitutions, codes, special laws and non-codified law).

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

Classes to attend

They refer to the activities in the classroom used normally by the group or subject. These hours will be distributed in the following way:

Theoretical lessons: The lecturer will expose and explain fundamental aspects that should guide students in their studies and understanding of the lessons. The student must actively engage in the learning process by reading, before the teacher's explanation, or in class, depending of the organization of teaching time, of those materials, manuals, monographs or texts provided or indicated previously.

Applied activities: They will deepen, through various materials (historic or historiographical, juridical, films or documentaries, debates, etc), on those aspects considered of most importance of the chapters. These classes will be participatory. The preparation and participation in applied activities are mandatory and evaluated. Sessions will be used to gradually introduce and get the student used to the handling of those materials and techniques of the discipline, historical and historical-juridical.

Complementary activities

It will be scheduled, into the teaching, specific activities of the subject, or of interdisciplinary character, in coordination with the groups of the same subject or other subjects that help to deepen in some issues or problems that may be of interest. For these activities we will have the appropriate teaching and administrative organization, and will be timely assessed in the context of the learning process. This will take place outside the set hours, within the times especially dedicated to them.

It offers guided tours to the historic building, of the University of Valencia, in La Nau street, a visit to the royal seminary college of Corpus Christi Valencia, as well as a guided tour to the "Archivo del Reino de Valencia". It may be possible to organize attendance to a conference or seminar if there is an event or historical congress which may be held at the University of Valencia.

Directed activities

As a way to reinforce the activity in class the teacher will schedule a series of activities which may consist of pre-reading or complementary lectures, research essays, etc.

Attendance to unscheduled tutorials

Students in a group may attend the office hours for students scheduled by each lecturer to solve any doubts on any topic or aspect related to the course or related, in any case, to the work being performed at that specific moment.

The implementation of complementary activities outside the centre will depend on their sanitary viability.

For all those vulnerable or affected students, the methodology will be adapted to the following non-presential activities:

- Individual work assigned.
- Tutorials by videoconference.
- Development of individual projects
- Others (to be specified)

In the academic year 2021-2022 all teaching staff will take part in the virtual tutorship programme regulated by the ACGUV 200/2011 in order to attend 50% of the tutorships that belong to them. The remaining 50% will be attended in person at the facilities of the Universitat de València and in the timetable established and communicated for this purpose. In this regard, the use of synchronous videoconferencing, from the place and in the timetable of the face-to-face tutorship, will be a valid option to attend them.

EVALUATION

The final evaluation of the course will be made according to the following percentages:

- Midterm exam , if any, and final examination in the second term (oral/s or written): up to 70%.
- Active learning dynamics in class and directed activities; objective tests and previous study work; and complementary activities a minimum of 30%.

To pass the course the student must obtain 50% of the percentage allocated to the final exam (oral or written).

21/22 First Term

It is allowed that students with special situations (Covid vulnerable people) realize the EC without inconveniences. Therefore, those who value class attendance will be flexible with these situations.
