SUMMARY

This subject will deal with the most relevant geographical, historical and cultural aspects, as well as the institutions in the English-speaking world, and their relationship with current affairs and contemporary society.

This subject should be useful as background knowledge for literature and linguistics subjects, such as "History of the English Language", or aspects related to varieties of the English language, the cultural context in translation, etc.

"Philosophical thought in English-speaking countries" complements "History and Culture" as both subjects provide general training in the Humanities with a focus on the English-speaking countries.

This subject further contributes to the development of social values related to gender equality, democracy, and linguistic and cultural diversity.

PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGE

Relationship to other subjects of the same degree

There are no specified enrollment restrictions with other subjects of the curriculum.

Other requirements

No previous knowledge is required but having an interest in history in general and in the way of life of the English-speaking countries and people, would be useful.

OUTCOMES

1000 - Degree in English Studies

- Students must be able to apply their knowledge to their work or vocation in a professional manner and have acquired the competences required for the preparation and defence of arguments and for problem solving in their field of study.
- Students must have the ability to gather and interpret relevant data (usually in their field of study) to make judgements that take relevant social, scientific or ethical issues into consideration.
- Demonstrate, within the field of English Studies, an ethical attitude that focuses on aspects such as gender equality, equal opportunities, the values of the culture of peace and democracy and a sensitiveness regarding environmental problems and sustainability while, at the same time, knowing about and being able to appreciate linguist diversity and multiculturality.
- Work in a team in contexts related to English Studies and develop interpersonal relationships.
- Work and learn autonomously, and plan and manage ones workload.
- Relate geographical and historical aspects and the most relevant institutions in the Anglophone world to contemporary society and culture.
- Interrelate different areas of humanistic studies.
- Have and apply general knowledge in humanistic areas related to this field of study.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

On successful completion of this course, students should be able to

- discuss issues dealt with in the subject, both in the spoken and written form. Ideas should be put forward or defended taking into account social and ethical values
- · find information from different sources and show this in the class and assessment activities
- · present correctly and by the deadline any team or individual activity.

- describe the most relevant geographical and historical aspects, as well as institutions in the Englishspeaking world and relate them to contemporary culture and society
- · compare the previous issues with other areas or disciplines

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

Theory-based classes:

Lectures by the lecturer, plus presentations of previously researched material by the students.

• Practical classes:

Discussion of texts, maps, advertisements, speeches, videos or any other material useful to understand historical and cultural issues specific to the English-speaking world.

In addition to lectures and seminars, students may be asked to attend tutorials in small groups in order to revise some of their written activities and comments.

In both, theory and practice, students are expected to participate actively through discussion, group work, online forums or blog contributions. This participation will be an important component of their final mark.

Additionally, students may be asked to produce written material and to make presentations.

EVALUATION

Assessment breakdown in the first and second calls:

- A) Final exam 70%
- B) Continuous assessment 30%

Those students who have been assessed during the term for their individual work and/or group work, including activities and projects, in-class participation, etc., will keep their grade in the second call. These activities subject to continuous assessment (B) can only be done during the course and cannot be handed in for the second call. To pass the subject students need to reach at least 50% of the grade assigned to the final exam.

The ability to communicate at the B2 (CEFR level) is required to pass the course as a whole. Students whose communication (written and/or oral) displays errors that are not consistent with the above level will fail the module regardless of their performance related to the course contents.

Plagiarism will not be tolerated; it is a serious academic offence. Any student who is found to have committed plagiarism in his/her work for the course will face serious consequences which will lead to failing the whole subject. For more information on what plagiarism is and how to avoid it, go to http://www.uv.es/englishphil/plagiarism

Intellectual honesty is vital to an academic community and for the fair evaluation of the student's work. All work submitted in this course must be originally authored by every student. No student shall engage in unauthorized collaboration or make use of ChatGPT or other AI composition software.
