RESUM

This course is a survey of American literature from the late 19th century up to the 21st century. It aims to demonstrate the continuity throughout the 20th century of all of the issues presented in the previous course and to consider the various forms they have taken in the genres of poetry, fiction and drama.

Primary emphasis will be placed on the extraordinary generation of Modernists. Some aspects to be considered are: formal experimentation (fragmentation) vs. the continuation of Romantic ideas, the need to “make it new”, the search for spiritual values and “the American” vs. “the Cosmopolitan”. We will also consider some representative figures from the Harlem Renaissance, the Beat Generation, the Confessional poets, and others.

We will read and discuss some of the key works (novels, short stories, plays) by a few of the most important prose writers and playwrights of the period under consideration. Among the aspects to be treated are: experimentation in narrative technique, the importance of the autobiography and the Bildungsroman in the 20th century, The Lost Generation and the death of the American Dream, the search for meaning in the de-humanized world of the twentieth-first century.

Optional question: A practical written composition task, worth 20% of the final grade, on a topic the students will have previously prepared on their own in compliance with the procedure explained in the Course Syllabus.

2. Workload and teaching schedule

MARCH:

Their Eyes Were Watching God, Zora Neale Hurston

APRIL:

The Catcher in the Rye, J.D. Salinger

The Bluest Eye, Toni Morrison

MAY:

The House on Mango Street, Sandra Cisneros

3. Methodology

Class notes on the assigned texts and pdfs with transcribed explanations of these assigned texts have been provided to students via Virtual Classroom.

Individualized tutorials and discussions are carried out through email exchanges with the lecturer to revise and discuss their voluntary essays on the assigned texts. These essays are optional and have been designed to prepare for the second partial examination.

4. Assessment

This is a 12-credit module with two partial examinations: one after the Christmas holiday and the other in June, each worth 40%, for a total of 80% of the final grade. Each examination consists of four written composition questions on the reading texts assigned throughout the year.

The second partial examination will also have a practical written composition task, worth 20% of the final grade as explained in the Course Syllabus.

Students who did not take the first partial examination will take a final examination: 8 questions on the reading texts assigned throughout the first and second semesters and an optional practical written composition task, worth 20% of the final grade as explained in the Course Syllabus.

The exam will take place electronically on the official date. The questions will be available through their virtual classroom site on 1 June 2020 at 9 a.m.

This assessment system will be carried over to the second call.

5. Bibliography

Materials on the course syllabus are available at the virtual classroom site.
