SUMMARY

The aim of the course is twofold: first, to discuss theoretical issues in grammar, and second, to attain an overview of English syntax. Emphasis will be placed on students' awareness and appropriate use of contemporary English grammar, and it will also involve becoming familiar with new methodologies that may be used for syntactic research today.

The course seeks to provide an introductory description and comprehensive analysis of the syntax of standard English at phrase and sentence levels, without forgetting that syntax and syntactic patterns cannot be analyzed without considering their communicative function, the context, and the cotext in which they are produced.

Thus, although our description of English grammar will focus mainly on simple sentences, it is our intention –following Carter et al. (2000) - to introduce a variety of contextualized samples of real written and spoken English. This will allow students to understand that grammar moves beyond the structure of simple sentences.

The subject draws on a combination of morphological and syntactic concepts that will help students to identify and produce different kinds of texts/genre (e.g. novels, newspapers, essays, notes, reports, news, conversations between friends, etc.) successfully. In this way, we shall be using texts not just to illustrate grammar points but as a way of understanding the grammar choices speakers have at their disposal, and why they speak or write the way they actually do.

PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGE

Relationship to other subjects of the same degree

There are no specified enrollment restrictions with other subjects of the curriculum.

Other requirements

Competence to communicate in English at the C1 level (CEFR) will be taken into account in the students' assessment.

OUTCOMES

1000 - Degree in English Studies

- Students must have acquired knowledge and understanding in a specific field of study, on the basis of general secondary education and at a level that includes mainly knowledge drawn from advanced textbooks, but also some cutting-edge knowledge in their field of study.
- Students must be able to apply their knowledge to their work or vocation in a professional manner and have acquired the competences required for the preparation and defence of arguments and for problem solving in their field of study.
- Students must be able to communicate information, ideas, problems and solutions to both expert and lay audiences.
- Apply ICT and computer programs, either locally or through a network, in the field of English Studies.
- Work and learn autonomously, and plan and manage ones workload.
- Demonstrate communicative and social competence in the English language (oral and written comprehension and expression, communicative interaction and mediation that includes correct grammar and style).

Course Guide 35347 English syntax

 Describe and explain theoretical and practical aspects of English phonology, lexis, morphology, syntax, text and discourse.

Demonstrate communicative and social competence in the English language (oral and written comprehe nsion and expression, communicative interaction and mediation that includes correct grammar and style).

- Describe and explain theoretical and practical aspects of English phonology, lexis, morphology, syntax, text, and discourse.

At the end of this course, you will be able to:

- Identify elements and categories in the syntactical levels in different English-language texts
- Explain in English concepts, theories and phenomena related to the syntax of the English language
- Distinguish syntactical traits in varieties of English
- Defend your point of view in issues related to the syntax of the English language
- Use IT tools and resources in the study of the syntax of the English language
- Make use of grammar to explain language usage in specific cases and how grammar contributes to the meaning of sentence and texts
- Assess linguistic correctness in an English-language text and correct its errors

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

Weekly: 4h lectures (2h+ 2h) in-class activities for 16 weeks which are distributed as follows:

- 1/ 1h ½ entirely devoted to theoretical description* followed by
- 3h in-class activities and theory-based practical sessions

During the lectures the students will be given the necessary theoretical input. This can be complemented by the set text book/dossier and the specific updated bibliography. These references will be made available through the Aula Virtual or the photocopying centre (2nd Floor, Facultat de Filologia, Traducció i Comunicació).

Students are expected to read the material for the unit to be covered in each lecture. Students should also show that they have grasped all the examples that illustrate each point covered in advance.

Students are expected to participate actively in class activities.

Attendance is compulsory.

EVALUATION

70% FINAL EXAM 30 % PORTFOLIO

- To pass the subject, students must obtain a minimum of 5 out of 10 in both parts (final exam and portfolio).
- For the assessment students' communicative competence at C1 level will be taken into account. Detection of plagiarism in the exam and the portfolio will result in failing the subject.
