TEACHING METHODOLOGY

Theory-based classes: Lectures and case studies. At the start of each class the teacher will assume that the students have read the material to be covered that day and that they are thus prepared to participate actively in the class process by answering questions posed to them by the teacher on the subject at hand.

Lectures will focus on clarification and discussion of key concepts and techniques rather than on exposition of matters students can find in the dossiers and bibliography. Consequently students are expected to work on assigned tasks (reading sections from course dossiers, answering questions set in advance) before attending class.

16 sessions: Introduction (4 sessions), contextual and technical explorations of the authors and works studied (12 sessions).

Practical classes: Problem solving and case studies. At the start of each class the teacher will assume that the students are prepared to participate actively in the class process.

Other activities: Tutorials for orientation in preparing papers and projects

EVALUATION

- A) Activities carried out in class 25%
- B) Final examination 75%

Students must pass the final examination in order to receive full credit for part A.

The mark for the 25% of part A will be carried over to the second call. These activities (part A) can only be done during the course and cannot be handed in for the second call.

For students who do not regularly attend classes, there will be a practical test or tests worth 25% of the overall grade, alongside the final examination.

Assessment Criteria

The written examination will evaluate both theoretical and practical aspects of the course: in order

- 1) to assess the student's assimilation of knowledge and concepts imparted during lectures and
- 2) to assess her/his understanding of and critical response to texts studied in class as reflected in the ability to manage the appropriate methods and techniques of analysis.

Active in-class participation is an important component of the class. Active participation consists in coming to class prepared to actively participate in discussions and other in-class activities.

The ability to communicate at the B1+ (CEFR level) is required to pass the course as a whole. Students whose communication (written and/or oral) displays errors that are not consistent with the above level will fail the module regardless of their performance related to the course contents.

Plagiarism will not be tolerated; it is a serious academic offence. Any student who is found to have plagiarised his/her work will face serious consequences which could lead to failing the whole subject.
