TEACHING METHODOLOGY

Exhibition of theoretical contents. The teacher will present and explain those fundamental elements that should guide students in the study and understanding of the subject. The student, for his part, must actively engage in the learning process through reading, prior to the teacher's explanation, or in class, depending on the organization of teaching time, of those materials, manuals, monographs or texts provided or indicated previously.

Activities applied: They will consist of commenting on judgments or press news, the resolution of cases or questionnaires, the analysis of commercial issues, etc. through which the student must develop the aforementioned competencies.

These activities may either serve as a complement to the presentation of theoretical knowledge carried out by the teacher, or focus on specific points of the subject program that will not be the object of presentation by the teacher.

These activities will be participatory and each teacher will indicate, where appropriate, which ones will be evaluated.

Through them, the student will be introduced and accustomed to handling those materials and techniques typical of the discipline.

Activities outside the classroom.

Complementary activities: Such as seminars, collective tutorials, visits to public institutions, etc., will be programmed in the context of the subject and will consist of specific activities of the subject or of an interdisciplinary or transversal nature, and always in coordination with the groups of the same subject or with other subjects. Where appropriate, the teacher must indicate whether they are subject to evaluation.

Directed activities: Both for the follow-up of the theoretical exposition and the realization of the applied activities, the teacher will indicate what readings, search for sentences or preparation of cases, etc., the student will carry out.

Although they are not the object of work in the classroom, the teacher may also schedule, within the student's workload, other activities that serve to reinforce or review the knowledge acquired by the student.

Attendance at unscheduled tutorials: To make inquiries about any topic or aspect related to the subject and its work dynamics, students may attend, at the time set by each teacher, the unscheduled tutorials set by every teacher

EVALUATION

- Final theoretical-practical test equivalent to 60% of the value of the final grade. The test will be written and the legal texts may be used in the practical part. To pass the course it will be necessary to pass this global test.

Regardless of the general evaluation system (written or oral), the teacher may determine in the annex the possibility of changing the examination system when he is forced to take the objective test on dates other than the official one in application of the rules provided for case of coincidence in the dates of examinations in the Regulation of evaluation and qualification of the University of Valencia.

- Additional assessable activities. They will have a value of 40% on the final grade. Applied, directed and complementary activities. The grade obtained in this part will be saved, where appropriate, for the second call. In the first call, it will not be possible to approve if this part is not approved.

Continuous assessment activities (directed or complementary) will not be recoverable on second call when, due to their nature, it is not possible to design a test that assesses the acquisition of learning results on second call. This fact will be determined in the annex of the teacher who will specify the directed and complementary activities that will be carried out within the framework of this teaching guide.

Although the continuous evaluation has been followed, totally or partially, if the student does not appear for the final evaluation test, the note that will be included in the minutes will be NOT PRESENTED.

Exceptionally, if the student requests it, and in view of the circumstances of the specific case, they may qualify with SUSPENSO, with the percentage mark resulting from the continuous evaluation.

Applied activities:

1. Carrying out practical cases and / or multiple choice forms. They will be collected randomly by the teacher at the end of the practical class, so that each student delivers 4 during the course. They will be valued at 1 point each.
