SUMMARY

The Degree Final Project (DFP) of the degree in International Business (GIB, for grau en International Business) is the last work that the student must complete to be awarded the GIB. The purpose of the DFP is that students apply their acquired knowledge and skills to analyze the business reality and implement strategies to improve that reality. With the help of their tutors, students should put all their knowledge in practice to endow their DFP with empirical content. In summary, they must show that they have acquired the necessary and sufficient skills and abilities to face the challenge of being a professional in the subject of their degree.

DESCRIPTION OF CONTENTS

1. Project

The project should concern problems related to the management and administration of international businesses in any of its functional areas and/or organizational levels, or with the international socioeconomic environment in which the companies operate, studying real contexts or, alternatively, considering a relevant theoretical matter for internationalization. In both cases, the work should be theoretically founded and contain practical applications as well as relevant academic or practical implications.

To know the required structure of the Degree Final Project and other questions of format, please see the generic guide (for all degrees) of the DFP corresponding to the academic year 2019-2020.

2. Personal appraisal of the degree course

Undergraduates shall make a personal appraisal of the degree in International Business indicating what it has meant for them in terms of learning and stating both positive and negative aspects. This evaluation should be made using constructive arguments and no appraisals employing unsuitable or derogatory language will be admitted. Appraisals should be no longer than 400 words.

3. Curriculum Vitae

Brief CV specifying average grade in their degree so far, certified proficiency in any modern language, academic stays abroad and work placements.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

Tutors must guide students through the process of presenting a contents table of the project and a schedule of the different stages of the work. Besides, they must help students to improve their work and assess it when finished.

Attendance at three tutorial meetings minimum with academic tutors. If a student is on a stay outside Valencia or on a work placement that prevents their attendance, this student and their tutor should establish other means of contact. In these meetings the lecturer-tutor shall guide their student on the preparation of their dissertation, providing specific references as applicable that may aid their documentation process. They must also discuss with their student the results and conclusions obtained.

At least one week before the official deadline, students shall submit a complete preliminary version of their projects to their tutors. After being authorized, students shall upload their DFP to the online platform of the University of Valencia (entreu.uv.es). At the beginning of the semester, students shall contact their assigned tutors.
