TEACHING METHODOLOGY

The teaching methodology is adapted to the assessment criteria detailed in the annex attached to this study guide. It takes into account the options permitted by the general regulations that are contained in paragraph 9 (for example, the programming of one or two complementary activities, or choosing to assess certain group or guided activities). However, in general, the methodology followed will share these basic characteristics:

1. The exposition of content. The classes will seek to encourage the active participation of the students in their own learning. The sessions will involve the discussion of hypothetical cases and problems, and the explanation of terms and concepts. They will rely to a large extent on the student having read and prepared the material contained in the set texts. The classes aim to be a series of informed dialogues, without prejudice to the faculty of the lecturer to provide detailed explanations on certain questions which may pose questions of special complexity.

2. Practical and/or guided activities. Throughout the course the lecturer will introduce a number of activities that will consist of solving practical cases or problems, analyzing and commenting on judicial judgements etc. These activities will be directly related to the material studied in class and the skills that the students are expected to acquire. They will serve to complement the explanations provided by the course lecturers and may require the student to work outside the lecture hall. These activities will obviously require the participation of the students and the lecturer will indicate which of these will be subject to evaluation. The lecturer may also program, within the limits of the workload expected of the students, other activities that may serve to reinforce or revise course material.

3. Complementary activities. At least one complementary activity, to be chosen by the course lecturer or proposed by the students, shall be included as part of the activities that require the compulsory attendance of the students. These may include attendance at conferences, seminars, or visits to institutions relevant to the course content.

EVALUATION

The final grade will be calculated by adding two different blocks/parts: on the one hand, the ongoing assessment and participation in the planned activities (30% of the final grade) and, on the other hand, the final theory-practice test which represents 70% of the final grade.

Students will have to pass the final test to pass the course. In the event of failing the test, the final grade put in the record shall be determined by the weighted addition of the ongoing assessment and the mark in the theory-practice test, which cannot be higher than 4,5 (fail).

The final evaluation may take the form of an oral or written test at the lecturer's discretion. The type of test designated must be indicated in the annex to the syllabus.

- a) If the final test is a written exam, it will be a joint examination that shall be common to all groups. Students will be allowed to use legal texts. Answering space won't be limited and it shall not be a multiple-choice (quiz) test. However, time will be limited.
- b) In the case of an oral evaluation, the lecturer has to indicate in the annex whether students may use legal documents when taking the exam. The lecturer will announce this within at least 5 working days, through the Aula Virtual, together with information concerning the location of the exam, its time, the date and its maximum duration, as well as the order in which each student shall be examined.

Regardless of the exam type specified (oral or written), the lecturer reserves the right to change the exam type when a different day has to be appointed due to overlapping exams, in accordance with the "Reglamento de evaluación y calificación de la Universitat de València."

The grade for the first sitting is formed by the result of the final test and the mark obtained by the student in the continuous evaluation. Regarding the second sitting, the mark for the continuous evaluation block will be maintained.

Continuous evaluation activities (guided activities and complementary activities) can't be replicated for the second sitting.

Despite having, fully or partially, participated in the continuous assessment, if the student does not show up to take the final exam, the grade in the record will be NOT SAT. However, as an exception, if the student asks for it, and taking into consideration special circumstances, "FAIL" might be the grade recorded.

The final grade will be formed by the addition of the following two elements:

1. Final theory and practice test with legal materials: 70% of the final grade.
2. Activities that may be scored (taking place during the lectures or outside that timeframe): 30% of the final grade.

Each lecturer has to define the activities that correspond to this 30% of the final grade in the annex to the syllabus. These might be both guided activities and complementary activities. At least one complementary activity has to be planned for the course. Complementary activities shall amount to a maximum of 7.5 hours during the course.

2.1.- Guided activities: between 10-20% at the lecturer's discretion.

2.2.- Complementary activities: between 10 – 20% at the lecturer's discretion. These activities may consist of:

- Activities organised by the Department of Commercial Law for all groups.
- Activities arranged by a specific group lecturer or various course lecturers for their respective groups.
- Students may carry out complementary activities of their own choice providing that these have been authorized by their group lecturer.
- Complementary activities may consist of participation in workshops, conferences, seminars, etc.
