SUMMARY

The subject "Procedural Law (Introduction)" is the first matter that on the procedural science that will have to cursar the student to obtain the title of graduated in Law. The others two are the "Procedural Law II", relative to the civil process, and the "Procedural Law III", relative to the penal process.

His development has to be successive, in any case, to the study in the first cycle of the Constitutional right, of the Institutions of Community Right, of the International Right Public and of the Penal Right (General Part), as well as of the essential elements of the Civil Right. At the same time, it is convenient that have purchased or are purchasing , the knowledges on the Administrative Right (General Part) and the General Theory of the Obligations and the Agreements.

By means of this subject the student enters in another understanding of the Right, cual is the relative to the realisation jurisdiccional of the juridical legislation and the utility of the procedural Right like autonomous scientific branch.

This subject, together with the others two compulsory subjects of Procedural Right, contribute highly to the training of the main professional profiles of the degree of Right. It treats of matters that have to dominate in good degree those people that in a future want to act professionally in the Courts of Justice (Judges, Fiscal, Lawyers, Procurators, Judicial Secretaries%or2026). But uniquely this introductory matter contributes essential concepts equally important in other professional contexts (political and public agents, mainly). To the margin of considerations strictly professional, this is a matter besides contributes notably to the democratic training, civic and critical of the students.

The aims of the teaching that gives are the following:

In the first place, present the basic concepts that, in the current juridical science, integrate and delimit the matter known like Procedural Right, that refers to the juridical ordination of the realisation jurisdiccional of the Right.

The second aim is to do patents the postulates and condicionamientos constitutional of the Procedural Right. In many respects of the same the Constitution does not leave to the ordinary legislator the free hands, but it conditions and limits of diverse ways his freedom of configuration of relative norms to the courts, to his headlines and to the process.

The third aim is to offer a vision of group of the judicial organisation, although deepening in the ordinary judicial organisation. It studies the statute of the personnel jurisdiccional (also the one of other personnel that helps it and that collaborates with that), the structure of the courts and ordinary courts and the organs and functions of government and administration of the ordinary judicial organisation, destacadamente the General Council of the Judicial Power.

In fourth place pretends present, together with the basic concepts of the procedural acts, some norms that are common to determinate classes of such acts, make in a civil process or in one penal or of another class, as well as the special problems of the sources of this part of the juridical legislation.
