SUMMARY

This subject is taught over one semester and is mandatory. It aims to familiarize students with the legal and social constraints of the profession, to understand the regulations governing issues such as hiring and salary policies, or the economic and labor system that future HR directors or managers will have to deal with.

PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGERelationship to other subjects of the same degree

There are no specified enrollment restrictions with other subjects of the curriculum.

Other requirements

To have completed the mandatory training module in Law and Social Protection Legislation

COMPETENCES (RD 1393/2007) // LEARNING OUTCOMES (RD 822/2021)

2126 - Master's Degree in Human Resources Management

- Students should apply acquired knowledge to solve problems in unfamiliar contexts within their field of study, including multidisciplinary scenarios.
- Students should be able to integrate knowledge and address the complexity of making informed judgments based on incomplete or limited information, including reflections on the social and ethical responsibilities associated with the application of their knowledge and judgments.
- Students should communicate conclusions and underlying knowledge clearly and unambiguously to both specialized and non-specialized audiences.
- Students should demonstrate self-directed learning skills for continued academic growth.
- Students should be able to self-organise, which means systematically planning and setting realistic time schedules for the different tasks in their personal agenda, prioritising their activities, attending to criteria of urgency and importance, using explicit tools and procedures to control the level of performance and optimising time.
- Students should be able to initiate, lead, promote and facilitate interactions, as well as to manage groups of people.
- Students should have the ability to communicate, influence and be effective in interpersonal relationships.
- Students should have assertive communication and negotiation skills. This means being able to carry out negotiations related to the direction and management of human resources, and being able to carry out a mediation activity that facilitates an adequate management of human resources.
- Students should be prepared for lifelong learning and self-development. The individual develops the ability to incorporate new knowledge, skills and professional competences.
- Students should be able to lead people and teams to achieve the objectives of human resources management. In this sense, they should develop a certain level of relational sensitivity and empathy.
- Students should understand and manage cultural and ethnic diversity in organisations.
- Students should develop a certain tolerance for uncertainty.
- Students should be aware of the legal constraints on human resources policies and strategies.
- Students should be able to assess and anticipate the legal consequences of organisational decisions taken by the company in relation to staff.

- Students should be able to quantify the costs of organisational decisions taken by the company in relation to staff.
- Students should know the requirements and implications of occupational risk prevention policies.
- Students should know the social and legal conditions of collective bargaining, in its different aspects and levels.

LEARNING OUTCOMES (RD 1393/2007) // NO CONTENT (RD 822/2021)

At the end of the course, the student should be able to:

- Assess and properly anticipate the legal consequences of organizational decisions made by the company regarding its human resources.
- Implement appropriate HR policies for management

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

The development of the class is structured around three axes: classes, preparation for classes, and individual tutorials.

1) Classes and oral presentations (MD1 and MD2: there will be two types of classes): On one hand, sessions to provide students with the opportunity to discuss all aspects related to a specific topic. On the other hand, classes in which the student must present the work done on the specific topic.

In any case, the teacher will provide the most suitable resources for further in-depth study of the topic.

2) Study and preparation of tasks for class (MD3, MD6). It is understood that the student's preparation for class is fundamentally for learning the discipline. Taking into account the philosophy underlying this process, knowledge, skills, and abilities should be achieved through an interactive approach and joint collaboration between teacher and student.

3) Individual tutorials are aimed at resolving doubts, further preparation, providing specific and additional information

EVALUATION

The grading scale ranges from 0 to 10 (100%), with 5 being the minimum grade to pass the subject. The final evaluation is based on the following quantitative criteria:

1) Evaluation of individual and/or group assignments of the students (40%). This item consists of the preparation of classes, the development of activities within the classroom, and the assignments that students must carry out autonomously outside of class time. Effective submission, content, and formal aspects (writing, spelling) will be valued, taking into account the instructions provided by the faculty for each activity.

2) Observation and recording of student attitudes (10%). Attitude and participation in class development and during tasks and activities proposed to be carried out within the classroom will be taken into account. Due to its nature of continuous assessment, this part is only assessable in class and cannot be recovered in a second call.

3) Final test or exam (50%). It will consist of a practical-type test questionnaire on the contents developed during the course. Passing the subject will require obtaining a passing grade in this assessment item (5 out of 10).

In the second call, the grades of all assessable activities carried out during the course will be maintained. In case of non-submission by students or not reaching the sufficient level to be approved, they may be recovered at the time of the final test of the second call or prior to its celebration. For this purpose, the faculty will propose to the students the corresponding evaluation activities.

In cases of fraudulent practices, copying, or plagiarism, actions will be taken according to the Protocol for dealing with fraudulent practices of the Universitat de València (ACGUV 123/2020):

<https://www.uv.es/sgeneral/protocols/c83.pdf>

The grading of the subject will be subject to the provisions of the Regulations for Grading of the Universitat de València (ACGUV 12/2004):
