SUMMARY

This guide is intended be an aid for students and tutors of the Final Master's Project.

It should not be seen as a limitation of the powers of both the tutor and the student, but rather as a facilitator of research activities to be carried out.

The final Work of the master consists of 6 credits and corresponds to the second semester, its objective being that the student shows the knowledge that he has acquired through the study of the Master.

It is, basically, a written work in which ideas, theories and reasoned and evaluated explanations on a specific topic are presented. It involves the completion, by the student, of a work in which they apply and develop the knowledge acquired within the Master.

The Final master Project can be a theoretical/empirical research on a problem/aspect related to Quality Management, or a practical application work on a specific problem/aspect or tool applied in a specific company. In this framework, the student will be able choose between two options:

OPTION A: Final Master's work with a theoretical-empirical research approach.

OPTION B: Final Master's work with an applied approach. If so desired, The Final Master's work can be carried out on the project developed in the company in which the internships have been carried out.

The FMW will be carried out individually under the supervision of assigned tutor. Although this will help to design and organize the work, it can only be done based on the work that the student is doing, thus being the responsibility of the student develop the project.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

To start the Master's Thesis, each student will prepare a document of 2-3 pages with the objective and justification of their work, a short script with the structure, methodology, the expected results and the bibliography reviewed and to be reviewed.

In this document the student will also indicate in which option the work is framed- option a or option b.

Once this document has been reviewed with his tutor, he will give the go-ahead to carry out the work.

EVALUATION

It is necessary to obtain a minimum grade of 5 to pass the course.

The Evaluation Committee will oversee evaluating the work. This Commission will be made up of 3 professors from the master. So that the student can defend the work against the commission, previously the work tutor must issue a report giving the go-ahead for the public defense of the work.

Once approval of the tutor has been obtained, the student must upload the work to the TRAMITEM platform of the UV and deliver three copies on paper to the secretary of Department of Business Management for subsequent Public Defense against the Evaluation Commission.

The Public defense of the work will be considered a necessary, but not sufficient condition to pass the course.

The TFM must be delivered to platform ENTREU with the signature and authorization of academic tutor.
