SUMMARY

Intercultural communication is a domain in full-fledged expansion and which basically consists of the study of interactions among individuals from different cultures, who may or may not speak the same language. Considering the process of socialisation which every member of every culture in question has been subjected to, it is relevant to assess their potential interactions and communicational problems due to their different cultural baggage. This subject aims to teach students how to function comfortably and efficiently in intercultural situations at the same time as they develop their advanced knowledge of foreign languages. They are also expected to assimilate the fundamentals of these meetings and to know how to prevent and resolve different problems which may arise and which originate from the cultural dimension.
