RESUMEN

This subject aims to instruct the student as to how to compose an academic text with a content which is effective, well-organised and grammatically correct. In order to do this, the steps of the composition process are analysed: planning, transcription and reviewing through the use of strategies which facilitate the production of well-constructed texts according to the type of genre to be achieved (research, dissemination, MA dissertation, etc.). The language (vocabulary, syntax, grammar) specific to academic texts will also be analysed, taking into consideration non-discriminatory uses as well as relevant rhetorical functions and differentiating features specific to the area of study (linguistics, medicine, tourism, economics, law, etc.). To this aim, diverse texts belonging to a variety of disciplines will be used, so as to show the relevant structures and most recurrent vocabulary.

The subject will be divided in two parts: one particularly dealing with the writing of academic papers within the field of linguistics, and another focusing on the writing of academic papers with literature as their object of study. Specific methods, resources and conventions particular to each of these two fields will be presented and discussed in class. Additionally, the course will instruct students in academic English in regards to writing their own research as well as to presenting it orally.

The final aim of this subject is to facilitate students the process of research, composition and presentation of their Master's Final Project, and of a subsequent doctoral degree within the humanities that they may pursue after the completion of the MA.

METODOLOGÍA DOCENTE

The course is divided into theory-based and practical classes. Theory-based classes will provide the guidelines to academic writing and oral presentation of research pieces. Lectures will focus on clarification and discussion of key concepts, methods, conventions and techniques rather than on exposition of matter students can find in the dossiers and bibliography. Consequently students are expected to work on assigned tasks before attending class. The practical classes will be devoted to problem solving and case studies. Students will be asked to produce individual written material and to give oral presentations, either individually or in groups. In addition to lectures and seminars, students may be asked to attend tutorials in small groups in order to revise some of their written activities. In both, theory and practice, students are expected to participate actively through discussion.

Teaching methods

TM1-Introduction of theoretical content through lectures, with IT support where relevant

TM2-Pair or group work

TM3-Set readings (autonomous reading or with classroom discussion, selecting relevant information, relating concepts, studying, completing work sheets, writing outlines or summaries)

TM4-Oral presentation of set readings, oral or written summaries

TM5-Theoretical and practical problem solving (exercises, compilation of data for analysis, analysis of written, oral, audiovisual, digital and/or multimodal texts from different genres)

TM6-Individual paper (design and development of a project for its oral or written presentation)

TM7-Group paper (joint design and development of a project for its oral or written presentation. Negotiation of topic, paper organization, distribution of tasks, joint writing and revising)

TM8-Oral presentation of individual paper with audiovisual support

TM9-Oral presentation of group papers with audiovisual support (Negotiation of topic, organization, distribution of tasks, writing, revising, and presentation options)

EVALUACIÓN

First call:

Assessment of class attendance and active participation (30%)

Assessment of competences through written and/or oral projects (70%)

Second call:

The mark obtained for class attendance and active participation will be carried over for the second call (30%). The remaining 70% will be also assessed through written and/or oral projects.

Please note that plagiarism will not be tolerated; it is a serious academic offence. Any student who is found to have committed plagiarism in his/her work for the course will face serious consequences, which will lead to failing the whole subject.
