RESUMEN

The purpose of this subject is to familiarise the student with the methods and resources used for research in English Literature. It is of a highly practical nature and aims to put her or him into contact with the tools necessary to carry out literary research. It stems from the fact that Literature does not exist as an autonomous entity but rather is found within a socio-political, cultural, ideological and aesthetic context which conditions its reception at different moments and in different places. To this aim, the student is introduced to the search for information resources in connection with different critical perspectives from which different literary genres can be analysed. Throughout the course, the student is familiarised with the bibliographical and electronic resources needed for literary research, including reference works, specific glossaries, consultation of catalogues from research libraries, use of databases of literary texts corresponding to different periods and genres, and periodicals relevant to different areas of specialisation.

1. Contents

Contents that appear in the teaching guide will remain the same.

2. Workload and teaching schedule

Credit distribution amongst the different activities that make up the workload will remain the same as in the teaching guide.

3. Methodology

Should the room accommodate the necessary technological equipment for the broadcasting and streaming of face-to-face sessions, videoconferences will be synchronous with classroom lessons.

Should there be no access to such type of equipment, a possible combination of the following methods will be employed to create the necessary learning environment for those students who are absent from the classroom:

-Videoconferences through Blackboard Collaborate that are specifically designed for online teaching and that are therefore asynchronous with the face-to-face sessions.

-Publication in Virtual Classroom of the necessary materials (readings, links, etc.) that may lead to a successful acquisition of the theoretical and practical concepts explored in class.

-Provision, through Virtual Classroom, of presentations equipped with audio recordings through which students may acquire the theoretical and practical concepts discussed in class.

-Handing-in of different tasks designed by the lecturer(s) and intended to reinforce theoretical and practical aspects explored in class. Tasks will be uploaded through Virtual Classroom.

4. Assessment

The assessment breakdown will remain the same as in the original teaching guide for both the first and the second call.

- Assessment of class attendance and participation (20%). Student participation will be monitored online in the case of students unable to attend and participate in face-to-face sessions (active participation in BBC sessions; completion of mandatory and optional tasks). Attendance will also be taken into account in the case of synchronous or asynchronous videoconferences.
- Assessment of acquired skills from written and/or oral evidence (30%). Required individual oral presentations will be carried out online, through BBC, should the student be unable to attend the face-to-face session(s) dedicated to presentations.

- Assessment of acquired skills through written and/or oral assignments (50%). All students must upload a digital copy of the written project onto Virtual Classroom.

5. Bibliography

Recommended sources and references will remain the same as in the original teaching guide.
