SUMMARY

In this subject, one of the topics that are fundamental in formal non-university education is addressed, such as the prevention of violence and the peaceful resolution of conflicts. For this, the legal framework that regulates the use of mediation in school conflicts is analyzed, the theoretical-practical foundations of school mediation are identified as a pedagogical instrument that will allow us to confront conflicts positively, school mediation plans and programs are studied, School mediation projects and strategies for the formation of mediation teams in educational centers are designed.

Conflict is approached as a normal phenomenon in a context such as that of the classroom or the school in which a group of people coexist, which does not have to become negative, but on the contrary, if properly addressed, it has It has great educational potential and can serve to strengthen relationships between people, which is why it is not about eliminating conflicts, but rather taking advantage of them to progress, to develop people's capacity for dialogue and to improve the basis of coexistence. In this matter, educational strategies and resources are provided for the prevention and constructive resolution of conflicts, intervention programs that have obtained positive results are analyzed, and students are taught to design their own resources for educational intervention.
