SUMMARY

The module 44410 Research in literature: Synchronic perspectives is composed of two units: Literatures in contact and Literature and society.

1. LITERATURES IN CONTACT

We will study the contact of languages and literatures through the literary production of contemporary authors who are in a situation of bilingualism or multilingualism, either because they live in intercultural areas or as a result of cultural hybridizations mainly due to exile and migration.

2. LITERATURE AND SOCIETY

This subject will address general theoretical questions about the relationship between literature and Western society since the Postmodern paradigm until the latest trends in interpretation: the book industry, transtextuality, reality and fiction, literature and commitment (gender, postcolonialism, linguistic and national identities, etc.).

PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGE

Relationship to other subjects of the same degree

There are no specified enrollment restrictions with other subjects of the curriculum.

Other requirements

There are no specified enrolment restrictions with other subjects of the curriculum.

Recommendations:

A sufficient command of Spanish in order to comprehend the oral presentation of academic contents, read all sorts of academic and literary texts and manage recommended bibliography.

COMPETENCES (RD 1393/2007) // LEARNING OUTCOMES (RD 822/2021)

2207 - Master's Degree in Language and Literature Research

- To acquire an interest in encouraging, through academic and professional concepts, the scientific, social and cultural progress of a society based on the knowledge of the field of languages and literatures.
- To be capable of conceiving, designing and implementing a research process in the field of languages and literatures with responsibility and scientific rigour.
- Poder contribuir a través de las monografías, trabajos de análisis y, principalmente, del Trabajo de fin de Máster, a ampliar las fronteras del conocimiento desarrollando un corpus que pueda merecer su publicación.
- To develop an ethical commitment, focusing on aspects such as gender equality, equality of opportunities, values of culture of peace, democratic values and environmental and sustainability issues, as well as the knowledge and appreciation of diversity and multiculturalism.
- To acquire the appropriate methodologies for scientific research in languages and literatures.
- To have a good command of the different techniques and methodologies for analysing and interpreting complex texts from a formal and/or conceptual standpoint.
- To be capable of locating, managing and synthesising specialised bibliographic information, in both the target language used in the Masters Degree and other modern languages, either in libraries or in physical or online archives.
- To acquire the sufficient knowledge for approaching texts scientifically from different contextual perspectives.
- Students should apply acquired knowledge to solve problems in unfamiliar contexts within their field of study, including multidisciplinary scenarios.

- Students should be able to integrate knowledge and address the complexity of making informed judgments based on incomplete or limited information, including reflections on the social and ethical responsibilities associated with the application of their knowledge and judgments.
- Students should communicate conclusions and underlying knowledge clearly and unambiguously to both specialized and non-specialized audiences.
- Students should demonstrate self-directed learning skills for continued academic growth.
- Students should possess and understand foundational knowledge that enables original thinking and research in the field.

LEARNING OUTCOMES (RD 1393/2007) // NO CONTENT (RD 822/2021)

At the end of this module students must be able to:

- explain and analyse texts and productions with scientific rigour from different contextual perspectives;
- apply methodologies and techniques that allow for the analysis of texts and cultural productions in depth;
- locate, evaluate and contrast bibliography pertinent to an assigned topic;
- analyse and evaluate the differences among literatures and cultural productions in contact and in relation to the societies where they flourish;
- analyse and evaluate phenomena derived from the contact among literatures and the relationship between cultural productions and society.

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

The methodology for teaching and learning is structured around face-to-face and distance activities.

The teaching methodology aims at encouraging students to learn actively and progressively, promoting the personal study of each of the units through class participation and the acquisition of theoretical and practical knowledge on the advanced theoretical principles of Comparative Literature (literatures in contact and cultural productions and society), its strategies and methodologies, as well as the analysis of the interferences among different literatures, cultural productions and semiotic systems.

Literatures in contact: Based on the premises of comparative literature, enriched by the perspectives of cultural, postcolonial and gender studies, we propose a brief terminological approach and a general overview of instrumental notions that facilitate a concrete analysis of the literary productions. Through the active participation of the students, a progressive learning is established to promote personal and group reflection, as well as the subsequent production in autonomy. Given the diversity of the previous training of the students, the texts worked on in class that are not written in Spanish or Catalan will be read in translation, although their reading in the original version will be recommended. In the Panoramas part, we will analyse a set of excerpts from the works of 8 male and 2 female writers. In the part of Studies of complete works, we have opted for a corpus of 8 works published from 1999 (6 female writers and 2 male writers).

Literature and Society: Each student, guided by the professors, will have to choose a literary reading from a list provided in the first session. This reading, which will address issues that we deal with in the subject, will serve as the object of study for the module work if the student decides to do so. In addition, in the context of the sessions, they will be provided with other references from different artistic fields, as well as excerpts of some of the books listed in the bibliography, which will be used to stimulate the debate among the students.

EVALUATION

The assessment system for module 44410 Research in Literature: Synchronic Perspectives will be based on the control of the competences and knowledge acquired by the students. On the other hand, the assessment of learning will be completed with attendance, participation, and the monitoring of the activities proposed in class.

In addition, students will carry out a final project for the module (focused on one of the two subjects that make up the module: Literatures in Contact or Literature and Society) on a theme agreed with the teaching staff teaching the subject. This choice must be communicated during the first month of class (February 2024). At the beginning of the semester, more precise indications will be given on the length (duration), format, citation system and rubric that will be used to evaluate this work.

Type of assessment and percentages:

- a) Final module work: 50%.
- b.1) Literatures in contact: Attendance (5 classes minimum) and active participation in class and other activities that will be developed throughout the sessions: 25%.
- b.2) Literature and society: Attendance (5 classes minimum) and active participation in class and other activities that will be developed throughout the sessions: 25 %.

The teaching staff will give further indications at the beginning of each subject on the delivery of exercises related to these evaluable activities that must be uploaded to the Virtual Classroom through Assignments.

Work that is not submitted in the established form and within the established deadline will not be accepted. The minimum mark required for the final work of the module will be 5/10 to be able to average it with the rest of the evaluable activities. The detection of plagiarism and the incorrect use of bibliographical sources in any exercise of the module will result in the failure of the same.

In the second call, the complementary evaluable activities will not be recoverable, but those that have been handed in on the agreed date during the development of the classes will be considered. The presentation of the final module work will take place in an interview in the office of the lecturers involved on an agreed date after the publication of the minutes of the first call.
